

11th A poem for CAP

From high above

The blue sky reflected on the crystal water of the oceans

Filled with an immense diversity of colourful sea creatures

Moving in every direction in vivacious gaiety

From high above the scene depicts a huge cloak of green

Every shade of green involving countless human shelters

And blue streams and ponds

As we get closer, our hearts freeze in shock

The green cloak is vanishing, being run after by an horrendous ferocious grey wolf

Now we can see clearly the scary skeleton, the remains of what once was alive

OMG!

They were not beautiful beings freely crossing the crystal sea waters

They are useless toxic stuff floating in a sea of darkness

They are grotesque skyscrapers painted in green,

They are myriads of cars crossing the land

Silly us, it couldn't be otherwise this is the result of our thoughtless actions!

Immediately we kneel and pray

Pray for a better future in which awareness leads Man to do the right thing

We, young people of this planet, as its guardians, can do better to protect it from being extinguished
