Climate Change

Climate change is the global phenomenon of climate transformation characterized by the changes in the usual climate of the planet that are especially caused by human activities. Portugal is vulnerable to the climate change impacts from extreme events associated to lack or excess of rainfall and heat waves. The rise in the sea level is also a problem for the Portuguese where a large part of its population lives.

(This image shows what the consequences of the climate change can be and alerts us so we start having some cautions in our daily routines.)
